Convicted? Of What? Colonel Mitchell for Senator We Are 100,000 Years Old

By Arthur Brisbane

Copyright, 1925, by Star Company.

A COURT-MARTIAL finds Colonel Mitchell guilty. Guilty of what? Telling the truth, of course, about a lot of official incompetents, and rendering an important service to his country.

The "conviction" of Colonel Mitchell convicts the War Department, in the public estimation, not Mitchell.

IN THIS whole performance the public can find one comfort.

The political career of Mr. Weeks, formerly Secretary of War, is as completely ended as that of a mackerel carefully salted and pressed down at the bottom of the barrel.

COLONEL MITCHELL'S career is just beginning. The people will not forget a man of courage, who has refused to join the

NAMES OF FIVE CITED BY GOODWIN WIPED OFF 'MURDER' LIST

Suffolk County criminal records at the State House have been changed, so that, as they now stand, Frank A. Goodwin, Registrar of Motor Vehicles, is given the lie in his charge that "they get away with murder in Suffolk County."

The changes were made last Thursday. This was the day that Goodwin flung his sensational challenge to District Attorney Thomas C. O'Brien that five murderers had been freed by their crimes.

The find in the offices of the Department of Correction proved the most astounding feature of the exchanges of charge and counter-charge between the ruler of motor-dom and the county legal prosecutor, and an investigation was immediately started by Deputy Commissioner of Correction Edward Bagley.

Goodwin based his argument on the original record, which said that five persons convicted of murder had been fined without imprisonment.

The entry was scratched out last Tuesday, so that now the record shows no murderers who were fined instead of being imprisoned for their crimes.

When the discovery was reported to Deputy Bagley and corroborated by him he immediately called in Miss Jane Law, the clerk who has the records in charge.

Miss Law recalled the episode perfectly. She said:

"A clerk from Mr. Manning's office called and showed permission to make certain corrections from Mr. Bates. The clerk wished to erase certain figures and substitute others, but I said that the figures must not be erased, but a line drawn through them.

"The first correction made was in regard to persons being convicted of murder and sent to State Prison. The original record read that three had been sent to State Prison. The clerk from Mr. Mac

FIRE TAKES LIVES OF 5 CHILDREN, TRAPPED IN ROOM UPSTAIRS

Worcester, Dec. 18.—While flames roared about her, a mother, carrying one baby in her arms, attempted vainly to rescue her four other children in their home in the Dawson section of Holden early today—and with the five children dead, the mother may also die.

With her husband by her side, and flames licking at their night clothing and their hair, Mrs. John J. Hoey, wife of a Worcester fish dealer, all but gave up her life in the raging fire that trapped the family of seven upstairs in their bedrooms.

The five children who died were:

ABBEY HOEY, fifteen years old.
WALTER HOEY, nine.
RICHARD HOEY, six.
PAUL HOEY, two.
MARY HOEY, 18 months.

Little Mary died this afternoon.

Only by the narrowest of margins did Hoey succeed in dragging to the open air his wife and the daughter Mary she carried in her arms. And now the mother is dying at the Holden Hospital, while the father is in a precarious condition.

As the flames licked away the lives of the four stamped children, they destroyed also many toys, games and other articles dear to children's hearts.

The toys had been bought for their Christmas gifts and had been secreted about the house by Mr. and Mrs. Hoey, and the children's grandfather, in the expectation of a joyous Christmas, only a week away.

The fire was caused by a large

Representative Frank R. Reid of Illinois, who was the Colonel's chief counsel during his long trial for insubordination, charged openly that the court-martial proceedings had not followed ordinary rules of procedure, but that at the very be-

FIND STATION AGENT WITH HEAD BLOWN OFF

Robert Trask, station agent at the Kendall Green station of the Boston & Maine in Weston was found dead in a field not far from the station today. His head had been practically blown off, and, at the present time, the authorities are unable to say definitely whether or not it is a case of murder.

Trask was last seen yesterday morning when he left his home. When he did not return last night his family started inquiries and today a general search was begun. Eventually searchers found the body, and, beside it, a shot gun. Chief of Police McAuliffe was notified at once.

Chief McAuliffe started his investigation, but had not progressed far when he decided to notify District Attorney Pelletier. As a result of his call for assistance State Detectives Sherlock and O'Neil were sent to Weston to aid in the matter.

New York, Dec. 18.—When Max Montesole sailed for Europe with Mrs. Elsie Mackay Atwill, he did so with his wife's permission and good wishes.

Mrs. Montesole, known on the stage as Mary Fuller, today revealed her part in the Broadway drama of real life. She told how her actor husband had come to her and confessed that he and the wife of Lionel Atwill had declared their love for one another.

Mrs. Montesole was then living with her mother in the country and Max was living in Greenwich Village. She said she listened until he was through, and then said:

"Max, old dear, I guess it's just another of those things. You go your way, and I will go mine. Let us not have any tearful scenes or messy publicity.

ENDS HER LIFE RATHER THAN BE A 'STAR'

Newport, R. I., Dec. 18.—Rather than go on the stage, Jane Doe committed suicide here by dashing her head against the wall of her home.

Jane was a doe, rescued by the men of the Newport Training Station when she was all but exhausted by her swim across the harbor. She was fed and cared for the sailors intending to cast her for a star role in Christmas Day festivities.

But Jane would have nothing to do with the stage, and one dared a budding theatrical career by using her head against the wall of her stall until she found the happy hunting grounds.

SANTA'S GOING TO VISIT BOY WHO SOUGHT HIM IN WOODS

Kenneth O'Hara, three years old, of Lewiston, Maine, who has not lost faith despite his vain hunt for Santa Claus in the woods. And his faith will be amply rewarded.

It required some courage for little Kenneth to set out down Eastern avenue into the woods in background to find Santa Claus. His mother told him "Santa was out in the cold," and the kiddie spent 15 hours in his search during a snowstorm. A posse of 500 found him asleep in the snow.

Kenneth getting his first food in 15 hours from Nurse Theresa Ouyea in Lewiston Hospital. He shows little effects of his exposure and will be out in time to hang up his stockings. Mostly he wants a horse from Santa and there are a lot of neighbors who are determined that Santa will leave one beside his Xmas tree.

FIVE CHILDREN DIE IN FIRE AT HOLDEN

overheated galvanized iron stove in the parlor.

The Hoey family were asleep early today in their two-story house on the Dawson section when Hoey, who conducts a fish store at No. 849 Main street, Worcester, was awakened by smoke and the crackling of flames.

Hastily waking his wife, Hoey leaped out of bed and started for the other section of the second floor, where the four older children were sleeping.

The youngest child, Mary, asleep in the room with her parents, was snatched up by the mother, who then rushed hysterically into the flaming area in a frantic attempt to save the other four with her husband.

Meanwhile George H. Carter of No. 74 Chatham street, a friend of the family, and John Murphy, father of Mrs. Hoey, had been sleeping in a down stairs room when awakened by flames.

Escape by the door was cut off and so Carter and Murphy, who is employed by his son-in-law at the fish market, leaped out of the window, both escaping injury.

LADDER MISSING.

Murphy, grandfather of the Hoey children, remembered a ladder he had left against the side of the house yesterday, but when he raced to get it, he found that it had been removed. Then his daughter and son-in-law came reeling out of the building, and it swayed, and caved in.

Someone sounded a fire alarm, but by the time the Holden fire department arrived, the Hoey home, built during the revolutionary period and the oldest house in the town was in ashes, and the four suffocated and charred bodies of the children the mother and father had attempted to save were somewhere in the house, stolen debris in the ruins.

Firemen played water on the flat ruins for hours in an attempt to kill out the glowing fires, and then a search was begun for the bodies.

Through some miracle Hoey escaped with only slight burns, but realizing that four of his five children had died, he collapsed and is in a precarious condition at the hospital.

Mrs. Hoey, with her hair burned off and her flesh seared deeply by the flames, was told the children who being cared for by neighbors. Her name is on the danger list.

$40,000 Loss in Fire at Worcester

Worcester, Dec. 18.—The business section of the city was shrouded in an envelope of smoke today resulting from a fire which drove frightened tenants of hotels and lodging houses from their rooms and destroyed $40,000 worth of property.

The fire started in the H. E. Shaw Tobacco Company's store at Spring and Front streets, and was well under way before an alarm was sounded.

The department heads immediately rang in a second alarm as it was evident that every piece of apparatus in the city was needed to fight the rush of the flames.

The fire quickly attacked a fruit store adjoining the tobacco company's plant, and the efforts of the firemen were confined to keeping the blaze from spreading further.

CRIME LIST AT STATE HOUSE DOCTORED

Then the clerk from Mr. Manning's office changed the part that had to do with persons convicted of murder and fined without imprisonment.

"The original record under this head read: 'Persons convicted of murder and fined without imprisonment—5.'

"The clerk from Mr. Manning's office drew lines through the figure 5 and made no substitution."

Goodwin's whole charge was based on the original record which showed that five persons had been convicted of various degrees of murder and had been fined without imprisonment.

Miss Law entered into the book of records a notation showing that the changes had been made by the clerk from Manning's office.

The registrar of motor vehicles could not do this, according to the clerk of court's explanation, because no such thing happened. The five who paid fines were listed under "murder" by a clerical error, and it was to correct this error that a clerk went from the courthouse to the State House last Tuesday.

The error came about in this way, according to the explanation given at Clerk Manning's office:

When the long list of crimes for the year and the disposition of those convicted of them is being prepared for the Department of Corrections, various branches are placed under one head.

Thus under "murder" there would be, actual murders, guilty of murder in the first or second degree, those convicted of manslaughter, those convicted of being accessories before or after the crime, those convicted of inciting or hiring others to commit murder or manslaughter.

The five who were fined should not have been placed in the "murder class" at all, according to the explanation.

When the district attorney was informed of the changes in figures on the records he had no comment save to say: "It is up to Goodwin to give the names of the five murderers he says were allowed to go with mere payment of fines.

"Goodwin has made caustic charges against this office," he said. "The records at the State House do not show that five murderers were allowed to go on payment of fines.

Klan Loses Its Masks in Fire at Kittery

Kittery, Me., Dec. 18.—The Wentworth Block went down in flames early today in Government street, center of the business district, and the entire stock of sheets and pillow slips of Kittery Klavern of the Klan was lost in the $35,000 blaze.

Of three-story construction, the long block housed many shops and offices, as well as a movie auditorium, a dance hall, and headquarters of the Klan, the Redmen and the Knights of Pythias.

The blaze is believed to have started in the men and women's furnishings store of the Kittery Syndicate.

REID CHARGES PLOT TO 'GET MITCHELL

ginning the word has been passed down to "get Mitchell."

Another Mitchell supporter in Congress, Representative La Guardia, introduced a bill to prohibit court martials from suspending for more than thirty days those found guilty under an article of war which Colonel Mitchell was held to have violated in attacking publicly government aviation policies.

Another proposal which will come before President Coolidge, who must approve or disapprove the findings of the court-martial, contemplates reduction of the suspension sentence of two years, to expire at the time Colonel Mitchell become eligible for voluntary retirement from the army.

This feature of the situation is surrounded by many legal technicalities. There is some doubt whether the years an officer is under suspension can be counted in fixing the time of his retirement.

It also is discretionary with the President whether an application for voluntary retirement would be granted or refused, and th Army's legal authorities are not willing to pass on the legality of an actual resignation from the Army during a period of suspension.

Colonel Mitchell is not disclosing his plans except to renew his determination to secure a greater air service. Through his counsel, Representative Reid, he told the country today that the fight would not be interrupted by the verdict of the court.

"I shall fight for an "adequate national defense," Mr. Reid said, "has only begun."

He denounced the court for failure to pass upon the question of whether evidence offered was accepted in proof of the truth of Colonel Mitchell's statements or whether it was received merely in extenuation or mitigation of his alleged offense. It was for this reason, he said, that the defense decided not to make any closing argument before the court.

strike that President Coolidge is running true to form."

After reviewing the anthracite situation briefly, Senator La Follette writes:

"In the meantime the possibility of a soft coal strike hangs over the country. President Lewis has written President Coolidge a letter couched in strong but respectful terms, calling his attention to the critical situation that has been created in the soft coal field by violation of the so-called Jacksonville agreement by many of the largest bituminous operators.

"The Coolidge administration has repeatedly proclaimed the Jacksonville agreement as one of the greatest achievements. Through the mysterious 'White House spokesman' it is announced that the President is terribly insulted that he should be asked this embarrassing question. It is announced that he intends to do nothing to influence the maintenance of the Jacksonville agreement."

FIND FALL RIVER WIFE SLASHED TO DEATH

Fall River, Dec. 18.—Beaten and battered and with her throat cut, Mrs. Romuald Dupuis, formerly Miss Berthe Lesiger, of Fall River, was slain in her home at Montreal, it was learned here today, and the Montreal police are confronted with a mystery.

Since leaving Fall River, Mrs. Dupuis had made her home at No. 18 Beaubien street West, in Montreal, with her husband, a brakeman employed by the Canadian Pacific Railroad.

Dupuis, arriving home early yesterday, found his wife dying on the floor of her bedroom. Her head, battered by a heavy instrument, had been split from crown to the roof of her nose.

A razor or sharp knife had been drawn across her throat, severing all arteries, veins and the windpipe. Even as Dupuis lifted her, she died.

The crime bears a strange resemblance to the fiendish killing of Charles Bernard and his wife at Rougemont last October. Evidence showed she had been killed only after a desperate struggle.

Dupuis is being held as a witness. So far, however, there is nothing to explain a motive for the murder.

As in the Rougemont double killing, the slayer went about his crime like a maniac. The weapons used in the killing are missing. They are being hunted as important clews to the slayer.

HOLIDAY BOOZE FLOOD TO BE DAMMED

Boston police today launched a determined drive, aimed at mopping up the holiday flow of liquor.

With orders to dry up the stream of contraband coming in from the sea, Captain Ross Perry of the state police division ordered his fleet of escorts Carlisle and Kellard with the police boat Watchman to maintain a permanent patrol between Governor's Island and the South Boston shore.

Five boats were chased and searched today as they cruised toward the fish piers in the gray hours before sunrise but they were allowed to continue on their way when they satisfied the policemen they were inward bound from the fishing grounds and had no liquor aboard.

Orders were also flashed to all officers from captains down to smell out if possible the huge Christmas and New Year's stocks of wet goods that are believed to be already stored away for the holiday trade in the backrooms of dozens of soft-drink parlors, the storerooms of many shady hotels and even in warehouses, where labeled as provisions they will be withdrawn in time to meet the holiday demand.

BIG TIME IS COMING

Reports of unprecedented advance applications for hotel reservations and plans for New Year's eve parties, in spite of the Napoleon of the Coast Guard blockade of the rum fleet, led to the vigorous drive.

While the Boston police are theoretically helpless in stemming the liquor wave that rolls into the city over automobile roads, after coming down from the Canadian border or from Cape Cod or Narragansett Bay, the word was passed to them to use every secret means they have access to in order to get information on the transportation plans of the bootleggers.

The harbor blockade is expected at least to disrupt the Christmas plans of several local bootlegging gangs.

AFTER THE "NIGHT OWLS."

As small fishing launches slid in among the harbor islands the "Watchman" looked in the lee of one of them, without lights, waiting for the right time to cut across their paths and draw alongside. The sudden barking of the "Watchman's" engine and the glare of a switched-on light was the first warning to the crews of the launches that they were being chased.

"Heave to for a search," shouted the sergeants as they drew alongside and their hands were on their hip pockets, ready for action in case of resistance. The same methods will be used against all the "night owls" between now and New Year's.

FOUR MEN HELD UP, ROBBED, BY AUTO THUGS

Victims Forced to Give Up Cash in Various Parts of Boston

Boston's crime wave again swept the city early today, after nearly two weeks of inactivity, when a new band of thugs shoved revolvers in the faces of four persons and robbed them of cash.

Back Bay reported one holdup, Brighton another, Jamaica Plain a third, and Milk street station a fourth.

Cash was obtained in every instance, and in at least one, jewelry was returned to its owner.

Police, in automobiles and on motorcycles, and others on foot, combed the city from one end to the other, but failed to arrest any suspects.

The thugs, by leaving the motor running in the automobile they used, eped away long before the police received reports of their appearance.

The holdup gang began operations shortly after midnight. Before 2 o'clock, having toured nearly all corners of the city, all four of their jobs had been completed.

Wescott H. Mercier, No. 466 Waltham street, Newton, figured in the closing chapter of their escapades.

The victim had been driving his automobile in Commonwealth avenue at Lake street a tire went flat. While he was making repairs a touring car appeared and two men advanced toward him. They commanded Merow to raise his hands. Satisfied that they had taken all of his cash, the pair sped to their automobile nearby and made off toward Back Bay.

Nelson Emmons, 23, of New York mechanical engineer, brought on by the city in connection with the proposed loop highway project, was the victim of an earlier attack.

In Newbury street, near Back Bay station, he met his surprise. Two thugs, approaching along the sidewalk from in front of him, each covered him with a revolver.

Two thugs pretended having motor trouble with their car near the Faulkner Hospital in Centre street, Jamaica Plain. James Baggett, taxi driver, willing to help, pulled alongside.

The pair pointed revolvers at him, robbed him of $18, then took his auto switch key to insure their safe getaway.

Two armed thugs escaped after relieving Robert Pitman, watchman in the Quincy Cold Storage Warehouse, of $22.

Andermatt, Switzerland, Dec. 18 (A.P.).—The body of Zinaida Jugowskaya, Russian prima donna, who leaped from the "Devil's Bridge" here three weeks ago, may never be found, in the opinion of eminent criminologists, who examined the scene of the suicide. TURKS SHOCKED BY DECISION ON MOSUL

Constantinople, Dec. 18. (A.P.)—The decision of the League of Nations Council awarding Mosul to Irak, under British mandate, was received with consternation in Turkey. When the verdict reached Angora, now the capital, the Cabinet was called in extraordinary session. Under the chairmanship of President Mustapha Kemal Pasha and with the chief of staff, the Ministers sat late examining all angles of the situation. Public opinion, as expressed in the newspapers, considers that the question has not been solved, but is entering upon a new and more complex phase.

GARAGE MEN, ON STAND, ACCUSE ALDERMEN

Swear to Attempts to "Hold Them Up" at Everett "Bribery" Trial

Two Everett garagemen testified today at the trial of Aldermen Frederick J. Chisholm and William C. Gunderson in Superior Court at East Cambridge for alleged conspiracy to request and accept bribes that they were solicited for a total of $250.

Samuel Cohen of No. 21 Belmont street, Everett, testified that defendants called at his garage at No. 376 Main street and talked with him about the place. Later he said, they told him to buy it with cost him $125 to get a garage permit.

"I asked them for receipts. I was going to pay that for a year when I already had to pay it once for taxes," said Cohen. "I found out I had the wrong man."

Cohen, corroborated in his testimony, Joseph Cohen, testified that a man waited in an automobile outside the garage while Chisholm and Gunderson talked with him on the first occasion.

Alderman Gunderson, according to another witness, Israel B. Paul, told Paul that it would cost him $75 to get a permit for his garage on Perry street.

Joint indictments charge that the alleged conspiracy existed between June 1, 1923, and last April.

The six jurors needed to complete the trial panel were selected today, and then Assistant District Attorney Robert Bushnell opened the case for the State.

The prosecuting officer declared he would show that the defendants had solicited and accepted bribes in connection with the granting of garage and other licenses in Everett.

Frank W. Pettingell, city clerk of Everett, called as the first witness in the case, produced the official city records.

A young woman stole a team of horses and wagon of a downtown merchant this morning and rode through the business district, including Washington street, at a speed that caused pedestrians to scatter in all directions, before she was pursued and overtaken by a policeman in Haymarket square, where the horses were stopped and Miss Mary Mahoney, 21, of 20 Tufts street, Everett, was arrested. She was taken to the police station and booked on a charge of larceny of a horse and wagon.

GRANT DIVORCE DECREE TO MRS. LANGWORTHY

Boston and Springfield Society Woman Wins Suit on Cruelty Grounds

A divorce decree was granted today to Mrs. Gertrude H. Langworthy, Boston and Springfield society woman, who once changed her mind about getting divorce in the middle of an argument.

By the decree, signed by Chief Justice Sheffield, Mrs. Langworthy was granted the custody of a child by a former marriage, Miss Elizabeth Langworthy, now 16 years old. Mrs. Langworthy charged her husband, whom she married under the name of Bigelow, with cruelty during visits to Boston and Sutherland road, in Boston.

Fined $1 for Killing Man

Houlton, Me., Dec. 18. (A.P.)—Frank H. Dyer, former member of the State legislature, was fined one dollar and costs in Judge Charles P. Barnes' court today for killing Louis Lizotte of Van Buren last May when he fired at an imaginary muskrat in a running brook.

College Humor

Mabel Gulliop of the Boston University College of Business, believes that college humor improves with age and has no regard for dignity.

SCHOOL FIGHTS FOR $25,000

A suit brought by the Boston Safe Deposit and Trust Company of Boston to determine what disposition is to be made of the $25,000 estate of the late Martin L. S. Elmer of New Salem was started in Middlesex Probate Court before Judge Leggat today.

Under terms of the will of the late Mrs. Elmer, the sum of $25,000 was left to the New Salem Academy, an educational institution founded in 1795, as long as it maintained a private school. Some time before Mrs. Elmer's death leaving no direct heirs, are of the opinion that the school is of a public nature supported partially if not wholly by town funds. They contend that because of this condition the bank should not pay the money to the academy.

The bank is seeking a decision as to question of facts in the case, leaving to the Supreme Court the question of law.

Then lawyers, representing the heirs-at-large of the deceased, appeared before the court to outline their arguments in the matter.

The case will be continued.

EASTON BOASTS OF RIVAL TO MELLIE

Henry Heath's Ten Cows, However, Keep Him Too Busy to Contest

Just to show that Mellie Dunham isn't all the pinkins when it comes to fiddling, the committee in charge of the pageant depicting the 200th anniversary of the town of Easton secured the services of Henry W. Heath, 70-year-old resident, who was for 32 years a selectman in the town. He fiddled several tunes and enthusiastic admirers state he is as good as Mellie.

When asked if he would engage in a "battle of music" with the local Maine violinist, Mr. Heath stated that he was too busy, having ten cows to milk every day.

Meanwhile city habits are fast growing on Mellie and his wife in Boston.

"Grunt" is sporting her first manicure and marcel and Mellie is wearing a brand new sheep-lined coat, a gift from a Boston concern.

And so between all the hustle and bustle of hotel life and getting acquainted with city life, Mellie and "Grunt" are going through hours of rehearsal for their vaudeville act, which opens here on Monday.

When asked if he would engage in a "battle of music" with the local Maine violinist, Mr. Heath

BOY MAKES THINGS HUM WHILE HE'S AT IT

Northampton, Dec. 18 (A.P.)—A drop of 40 feet from the second story of the State police barracks at Leeds and the appropriation of a police motorcycle gave Stanley Eyre, 15, an escaped Lyman School boy, four hours of freedom early today.

After his long drop to the ground the boy headed the patrolman's motorcycle down the hill and turned on the gasoline before its momentum was checked. He circled about the city for a time and was finally found lurking in the freight yards.

The boy, whose home is in Westfield, was picked up in Hadley on Wednesday for return to the industrial school.

William McKissock Dead

One of Boston's real old-time shipping men passed on today when William McKissock, of the firm of Charles Hunt & Co., shipping brokers, died at his home in Brookline. Mr. McKissock had been identified with the shipping industry and was known in maritime circles throughout the country. A son, Allan, and a daughter, Mrs. F. Gorham Bridgham, survive him.

Ex-Sweetheart of Salm Tries to End Her Life

Berlin Dec. 18. (U.N.S.)—Lyda de Putti, a famous German film star, once mentioned as a sweetheart of Count Salm, attempted suicide today by jumping from the second story of her home to the street. She suffered only bruises.

Lyda had a dispute with a friend, who left her home in a rage.

'HAVE YOUR FUN' MAX IS TOLD BY WIFE

Mrs. Montesole Regards Her Eloping Husband and Mrs. Atwill as "Poor Chumps"

couple of chumps, but if you think you love each other there's nothing to say. Goodbye, good luck and God bless you."

Montesole she said, arranged to support their eighteen-months-old daughter, Eleanor Ruth. Then he packed his belongings and moved out. Mrs. Montesole went to live in the Greenwich Village apartment with her mother and baby.

Mrs. Montesole, a charming young woman, slender, graceful, is gifted with a sense of humor that permits her rippling laughter to punctuate the dramatic situations of this strange marital mixup.

She was sitting, picture fashion, in a large overstuffed chair, with her hair hanging carelessly waist length.

GRAM DOES HER STUFF.

From the bedroom comes the voice of her mother singing a lullaby to little Eleanor Ruth. She explains:

"Baby is just going to sleep. Her grandmother rocks her every night and is spoiling her as grandmothers do."

Then she tells of Max Montesole, her husband, who has left that atmosphere and the good night kiss of little Eleanor Ruth, because of his love admitted for another man's wife. She says:

"The thing will seem doubly funny to you when I tell you that I eloped with Max. I met him when I was playing with Margaret Anglin in Chicago in 'The Woman in Bronze.' I was the 'Wicked Woman' who was in love with Miss Anglin's husband—in the play, of course.

"It seems that I have always played the part of the 'other woman' on the stage. This was my fourth appearance as Max's vis-a-vis. I had played Brunhild to Max's Siegfried, I played the 'deceived wife' in 'The Black Ship Jest.' It was a refreshing change to be a deceived wife.

MAX NO AMATEUR.

"Well, getting back to my meeting with Max. Miss Anglin brought him from London to play the part of 'Paddy' the good-looking boy friend of the abused wife. Max fitted the role; he was good-looking—and Max is loveable.

"We took to each other and finally eloped to Los Angeles. His first wife obtained a divorce and is now married to a wealthy man in Canada.

"We came back to New York and returned to work this time in different plays. Max was a doughboy hero and a good scout. We got along as well together as two people in the profession can get along on good wife. When Elsa Mackey came he was tickled pink. Max has never been anything but a loving father.

"Last Summer between engagements I took Eleanor Ruth to the country while Max stayed here in New York and rehearsed his part in 'A School for Scandal.' When the play opened Lionel Atwill saw Max' work and offered him a part in his new play, 'Deep in the Woods.'

WELL, WHO'LL ANSWER?

"Max and Elsa Mackey (Mrs. Atwill) had met before. But it was during the rehearsals at the Atwill home in Douglaston that their friendship ripened into love or infatuation, as the case may be.

"Of course, it's nothing but infatuation on the part of both of them. And who knows the difference between love and infatuation?

"So Elsie went to Lionel and Max came to me. They were perfectly open and above board about the whole affair. And there would have been no nuisance if Atwill hadn't made such a mess of it with that silly rage and all his pretense.

"Atwill and his attorney came to me and asked me to sign an application for the arrest of Max. Of course I refused. I am happy and will soon be at work in a new play, acting the part of the wicked woman again, stealing the love of some other woman's husband."

And Mrs. Montesole laughed like a care-free schoolgirl. Perhaps she has visions of the finish of Max's latest romance. Perhaps she just naturally has a wonderful sense of humor.

You Get It First in the Evening American

TWO smashing "scoops," each one of world-wide interest, were scored by the Boston Evening American within ten days.

It gave to this city and New England the verdict in the Rhinelander case from one-half to two hours ahead of every paper in this territory.

Yesterday it was the only Boston paper to print the verdict in the Mitchell case.

In addition to these, the Boston Evening American is pleased to be able to present to its readers the following exclusive stories in its local field:

Dec. 17.—Lewiston, Me., boy found after fifteen hours in snow.

Dec. 17.—Grandmothers in court battle over child.

Dec. 16.—One dead in dynamite explosion in Lexington.

Dec. 12.—Hosanah Bodourian suicide at Northampton.

Dec. 12.—Death watch as aged teacher strives to wake old lady his bride.

These are pointed out merely that you may see that when you want the NEWS when it is NEWS—the place to look is in the columns of the Boston Evening American.

We are glad of the opportunities of being able to serve our readers in this manner.

FLOSSIE and MARY ROSE MIDDLETON are two sisters the daughters of a widowed mother. Both of them work for Dexter & Co., big Congress street bond firm.

Flossie, a beauty, helps to keep the files. Mary Rose is secretary to JOHN MANNERS, the sales-manager, with whom she is deeply in love. Manners, however, is engaged to DORIS HINIG.

Mary Rose discovers that Flossie has been going on long drives with the head of the company, HILARY DEXTER. Dexter is a married man, and the father of grown daughters.

One night when the girls' mother, MRS. MIDDLETON, thinks that Flossie is spending the evening with SAM JESSUP, who is Mr. Dexter's secretary, Mary Rose and DR. TOM FITZROY find her in a private dining room of a Wayland inn. With her are Alice James, Mr. Dexter, and another man.

She is deathly sick with an attack of acute indigestion. Tom brings her through it while the two men sneak away, fearful lest Flossie die and they be dragged into a scandal. That night Tom asks Mary Rose to marry him and she refuses, admitting that she is in love with another man. Tom says that nothing in the world can stop him from having her. He kisses her and goes.

A half hour later the phone rings, and she runs downstairs to answer it.

The WHERE CAN I BUY Service saves footsteps

For Busy Shoppers

The service supplies accurate, time-saving directions. If you ask: "Who sells Proppo Xmas tree lights?" "Who handles Langsdorf toys?" "What store has the Maytag washer?" or any one of a thousand similar shopping questions, you get immediate directions which are a decided convenience to a busy shopper. They save useless searching.

Use This Free Service

Its monster Information Index—80,000 cards carefully indexed—is at your service free of charge.

Its sole business is answering shopping and business questions. It is not interested in selling or advertising merchandise. It does not maintain a special list of firms whom it favors.

If near, phone Liberty 4000. If far, write. If in Boston, come in.

KEEP THE DUST OUT OF YOUR SET

Dust in radio sets is often the cause of a loss in efficiency. This is especially true in damp weather, when the dust is more damp and allows the fine radio current to leak. The worst places for dust to collect is about the binding posts and terminals and to moon the plates of rotary variable condensers. It may be removed from between wires and around terminals with a small brush, about two inches wide.

USES ELECTRIC HEATER TO CHARGE BATTERY

A Boston man who lives within the city limits where only direct current is available, claims that when he wants to charge his radio battery all he does is connect it in series with a small electric heater of the sunbowl type. The resistance of the heater permits just the right amount of current to pass into the battery.

GREAT RESULTS OBTAINED WITH CARBORUNDUM

In the early days of radio it was common practice to use crystal detectors of the carborundum type. The sensitiveness of these devices was increased greatly through the use of an old dry cell which supplied a minute current to the crystal through a potentiometer.

R. KINGSBURY

TONIGHT at Mechanics Building, Eddie Shevlin steps into the ring with Al Mello of Lowell in what is the battle of New England welterweight championship honors. Shevlin is backed by the unanimous confidence of the fight fans who have known his disappearance.

Eddie Shevlin as a boy and boxer is known as a comer. He is a game scrapper and I believe have taken a liking to him. Careful attention to his training routine at all times has more than offset his lack of experience.

He is now ready to meet the best as one of the greatest welterweights this country has produced to date with Mickey Walker, Dave Shade and Jack Britton.

Mello has had a meteoric career. Has built up a group of fans like Hogan a prospect in that young man and to me is a comer. Al has a punch, is boxing well and battering out. He will be one of the outstanding boys to watch out for in the future. Mello has won out difficulties using the National Guard team and a place on the U. S. Olympic team.

The way Al's work of Mello as a professional bout it him to the top of the heap in a short time and has made him the logical contender for Shevlin's title.

Eddie's going against a portsider for the second time in his career. It's one other title with a south paw was against Harry Mallette of Elizabeth, N. J., whom he defeated very handily.

BOXING fans long ago came to know Jack Dempsey's peculiar style of fighting. A fighter who has never failed to give satisfaction his work in the ring is

Most Famous Left Arm

Above is the most famous arm in athletic history. It is the left sock bone of Red Grange, "phantom of the gridiron," who was forced to the sidelines by dislocations to the member while in the midst of one of the best money making years any athlete ever attempted. Doctors are watching the wing, hoping to give the "Superman of the gridiron" back to the football in a few days.

Tuesday he appealed to the Faculty committee, that he appear before the members of the National Sporting Club in the city's American field to give such a demonstration of which is said for Paulo.

The amazing fighters have made Shevlin their target, chance Both men are in the unknown after weeks of training.

The Mello mentors point to his early over Jimmy Jones of Providence as a man who was given the tailors' job a lot of trouble as a puff on what they expect the boy to do to Eddie.

Mello feels confident that he will step along with a ton of stuff at Shevlin's boxing knowledge and if he and bring him through to victory.

Al should have a great chance to win tonight's fight if he does not burn himself out in the early stages of the contest. Then again he may win early and decisively in

FOXY GRANDPA'S BEDTIME STORY

By Foxy Grandpa

I KNEW we had several wild animals on board the ship which were being taken to England, but I did not know them by name. In fact, I didn't know they had names until this happened.

I noticed that Bunny did not spend much time on deck with us, but was always going below.

One afternoon he explained he was going down to see his friend Lizette and dashed away.

"Who's this Lizette that Bunny has gone to call on, Bobby?" I asked, amused at the rabbit's haste to see his lady-friend.

"I don't know, Foxy Grandpa, unless it is the French maid of that countess on board. She might like rabbits."

"But why did he leave just as the band started to play?"

"Couldn't guess, Foxy Grandpa, said Bobby, "unless it is teatime and Lizette gives him something good to eat."

The band started to play and the stewards came around and served tea. After we had finished I said to Bobby:

"I think I'll stretch my legs, Bobby. "Want to come with me?"

"Yes, sir," replied Bobby, and swallowed the last half of a jam sandwich.

"Let's go down and see the animals. I wonder how they are standing the voyage," I suggested.

So below decks we went. There were a tiger and two elephants, several lions and the biggest hippopotamus I ever saw in my life!

"Plenty of ballast down here," I laughed to a deckhand we passed as I stood viewing the traveling menagerie.

"You're right, sir," responded the sailor, "but I don't fancy the traveling with a circus. You ought to hear them roar when we get in a rough sea."

I stood a while talking to my friend, the deckhand, when Bobby said:

"Let's go down this way here and look at the hippo."

We passed back of the stalls and cages where the animals were kept and I had to laugh when we reached the big cage where the hippo was. For there sitting up on his hind legs and keeping time with the strains of the music which came down from the upper deck was Bunny.

We kept still and watched. Back and forth went his paw with the beating of the drum and—will you believe me when I tell you that that great hippo was swaying from side to side and doing a regular shimmy?"

Then Bunny spied us. "Come over and see Lizette dance, Foxy Grandpa. She loves music and shows it. She says the voyage would have been awful if they hadn't had a band on board."

DR. REED'S SECRETS OF HEALTH

By Charles A. L. Reed, M. D.
Former President American Medical Association

TO one who has bumped into bank holidays in England or the innumerable religious holidays of France and Spain, but especially Italy, the whole holiday business becomes more or less of a nuisance.

That is because one who is himself on his big holiday doesn't wish to be bothered by a lot of little people on their little holidays.

The religious holidays date back to the dark ages and have multiplied with the colonization of saints.

Bank holidays in England date only from 1871, but in mediaeval times the routine of labor was probably more interrupted than it is now by the occurrence of saints' days and holy days.

Summer holidays have grown up during the last fifty or sixty years. The change, perhaps, is due to the increasing strain of living and to the introduction of easy railway traveling.

But there is a deeper reason for holidays than the celebration of saints, or the commemoration of great events, or the mere wanderlust of the tourist.

The deep reason for holidays is the natural biological law of rhythmic action with the necessity for periodic rest in all living things, man included.

Professor P. T. Herring of St. Andrews' Institute of Clinical Research has explained this law of rhythm, which he calls the law of fluctuation. The units of the body tend to fluctuate between complete activity and complete rest. It is this mechanism which prevents undue fatigue and its ill effects.

Expansion and contraction of the heart, alternation of waking and sleeping and the annual holiday are illustrations of the same principle. There should be no workers without holidays for the simple reason overwork is no more meritorious than overeating.

It is impossible to test whether workers who take holidays live longer than those who do not, as hereditary and other factors enter into consideration. Sir James Paget, who died at eighty-five, had, as a struggling young surgeon and pathologist, no holiday for fifteen years; he had several attacks of pneumonia in the course of his life and died with signs of congestion of the lungs. Sir Henry Holland spent two months of every year in travel for nearly sixty years and died suddenly during a holiday at the same age as Sir James Paget.

A holiday is sometimes taken unconsciously just in time to avert a breakdown or the onset of an infection such as tuberculosis. It would be interesting to speculate on the frequency with which this happens. The zest for holidays goes with advancing age, and some men find recreation in the variation of their work. This, however, does not provide for hygienic repair and fortification.

Some people get on well without holidays by taking regular exercise. Young people, especially when growing, need much more rest and holidays than is usually recognized, certainly more than adults. As habit takes hold desire for holidays is less clamorous, but if a person enjoys a holiday he is at the right age for that particular holiday.

This is part of the rhythm of life. The very valuable weekly bath has been expanded into the week-end habit which, if well-arranged, may obviate Summer holidays altogether. The week-end, however, is often more of a distraction than a rest.

Since the rest factor is largely mental a holiday at home is not always good, as it does not give a change of mental atmosphere. For this reason it is a good thing to get away from the family or the usual associates.

The results from routine should be continuous and complete; it is no good to keep in touch with work, and so the holiday abroad, when letters are not forwarded, is a very good thing. Foreign holidays, however, are liable to be too hectic, but a sea voyage enforces rest.

RHYMING OPTIMIST

By Aline Michaelis

HERE for the days of children's glee mistletoe and holly, gifts under a shimmering tree, Christmas will soon be here! Oh, the gleaming whirling sleet from the north advances merrily, the children's feet trip through Christmas dances. Come fill the frosty air, shrill and happy voices send their gladness here and there till old Earth rebecomes. In his crib the child asleep dreams of promised presents, glimmering in his slumbers deep. Santa's soft presence. Hope a-tiptoe on the stairs, sounds of laughter wafting, hidden gifts and secret airs, things too good for telling. Over all this merriment, all this Christmas splendor, comes a spirit of content, tranquil, sweet and tender. Ho, for bright and joyous days, banishing all sadness, when on Earth the wonder stays, Christmas love and gladness.

WITHIN the happy house of memory bright figures beckon and sweet voices call, unaltered by the years dwell here for me old scenes and beloved gone beyond recall. Though all the passing world count these men gone who long have vanished from the busy scene, still at a word, a tone, loved visions dawn where here in memory's house they live serene. Here gleams the smile that graced a loved one's lips (like magic, how it brightens all things still!) Here sunnights gold gilds ancient, anchored ships; scenes old and far wait here upon my will. Though Earth be now a lonely place for me, I do not fear its threats of grief or pain; within the House of Memory I hold all dreams wait, the old loves bud again.

PROSPERITY IS REFLECTED IN MARKET

By FRANK H. MELSON,
Financial Editor.

Not many months ago people frequently asked why stocks were rising in Wall Street. A good many declared there was no valid reason for the rise and lied all sorts of things to say about the supposed "money pyools back of this stock or big group of manipulators." Well, few people have been appearing since that time. Earnings and distribution of earnings in the form of dividends have been steadily increasing but not least was the fact that to the law repealed taxes, freight rate middles in two months removed five millions of marks for the Steel Corp. time in a December week. That was a decided jolt for the bears.

Jackson & Harris say to Ginter memorandum: "We have received a second communication from the Ginter Company, proposing a cut in the rent. Inasmuch as we have not offered stock for immediate delivery instead of a 10 per cent basis, we have been previously mentioned.

"This proposition will result as follows:

"Holders of common stock will be paid, each month, one-twelfth of 10 per cent of the par value of stock held in Commercial Company, making 10 shares in the year. The next preferred dividend $1 per quarter amounting to $4.

"We believe the treatment will be given to the holders of common stock under $100 per share, while owners of more than 100 shares will receive preference in the distribution of the offer to common preferred stock holders and recommend your acceptance."

Deputy Commissioner Alice H. Gandy of the commonwealth of Massachusetts Savings Bank Life Insurance tells me: "Most investment years have elapsed since the total policy was written under this system and during that period more than 4 million dollars have been received from policyholders as premiums. In return we have loaned to date about $2,000,000. Death claims have been paid accordingly and dividends amounting to $1,313,134.00, and cash surrender values to the policyholder are distributed to the amount of $1,313,134.00.

"The object of the insurance is to insure that life insurance for persons of small means should be conducted on a strictly economical basis and on a commercial understanding."

At the annual meeting of Massachusetts Trust Company Association, following officers were elected: President, A. C. Hammond, vice president, Arthur W. Machmer; secretary and treasurer, A. J. Moseley. The executive committee includes F. W. Denio, Alvan T. Fuller, Arthur A. Hodgkins, L. Hilliard, Samuel H. Wolfe and Arthur B. Chapin.

Great Britain's Getting Mosul Stamps League of Nations a Political Organization

Great Britain gets Mosul. The Turk, who has owned the territory for a thousand years, is ground between the upper millstone of the League of Nations and the nether millstone of the World Court.

The Turk deserves it. Internationally he is a bloody ruffian.

Grinding between two millstones is none too condign a punishment for the nation whose political methods include cold-blooded massacre and pillage. The ends of civilization are served by transferring the Kurds, Chardeans and Christians to more humane British rule.

But the method by which it was done shows that the League of Nations is a political organization, and that the so-called International Court of Justice is little more than the hired lawyer of the political league.

If the League and the Court are the organs of justice, even-handed and blind to all but the law, how can it tear Mosul from Turkey in a proceeding which Turkey was induced to participate in only upon the promise that final decision would not be taken without her consent?

If, on the other hand, the League and the Court are a political octopus—a sort of European Tammany Hall—why are we asked to enter either League or Court on the theory that it is an organ of non-political justice?

If the League and the Court are devices to avoid war, how is the League going to enforce the Court's decision against Turkey without war under one name or another?

Great Britain might have gotten Mosul by giving the Turks a good old-fashioned British licking four years ago. Now she will get Mosul by giving the Turks the same good old-fashioned British licking.

The difference is that four years ago it would have been a good old-fashioned British licking in a little war of imperialism.

Now it will be carrying out Britain's sacred duty to Christianity under the holy aegis of the League of Nations. Britain will defend a mandate, not conquer an oil field.

All of it, mind you, under the sage legal advice of the World Court, the hired lawyer of the League of Nations. As William C. Whitney famously remarked about Elihu Root:

"He's a good lawyer. He doesn't tell me what I can't do, but what I can do and how to do it!"

That is not the American conception of a Court.

A Blessing Is the Telephone

But There Is One Very Big Hitch

Without the telephone, how could we live? how could we accomplish the day's work? how could modern business be made possible? It literally COULD NOT be possible.

The telephone is a BLESSING, and in the United States it has been brought to a degree of perfection undreamed of elsewhere.

BUT, here comes the but—

Have you ever kept a business appointment with a man in his office, when it was necessary to see him—as the ready-made tailors say, "face to face"? Have you sat TRYING to talk business, and have you had your friend interrupt the talk, once, twice, three times, six times in response to a telephone, and talk four or five minutes on that telephone, while YOU WAITED?

A great blessing is the telephone, annihilator of space. Ditto a warm bath with plenty of good soap. But when you go to talk business with a man at an appointed hour, you don't expect him to say "Excuse me, while I take a warm bath."

There ought to be some definite regulation about interrupting personal business for telephone talks.

A Winter's Tale

Molly—Long, Lean, Blues Song—Are Over

Mellie Dunham has performed one service greater than tempting New York's dignified Mayor Hylan's toe to his fiddle's "Irish Washerwoman." With the help of Henry Ford, Maine's champion fiddler has proved that high romance can come to advanced age.

Back when he married "Grami" he probably thought that was the culmination of all the color and the tingle in his life. But then came long, lean, hard years. Mellie seems to have acquired a philosophy of contentment with which to meet them.

He is now among those who will envy him the color of his Lake Pemigewasset and the tingle of his air blowing out of the pine cuticles of the White Mountains and down the valley at the Androscoggin. But Mellie admits he was down to his last eight dollars.

Along comes the magician Vandeville to dump a thousand dollars a week into his lap. Grami cried a little, though Mellie was cracked to keep his courage up.

But visions must be whirling through their old heads as it all. Humble cronies, but tinged with gold. And Mellie's unless we misjudge him, must be tinged with purple. Think of the purple tales at "backstage" he can tell when he gets back to sit around the stove in the store in Norway, Maine.

Boston's Debt Limit

Senator Draper's Bill Would Take the City Out of Beacon Hill Leading Strings in This Case, at Least

Senator Eben S. Draper of Hopedale, Chairman of the Committee on Municipal Finance, has introduced a bill in the Massachusetts Legislature to permit the City of Boston to establish its own debt limit upon which all future appropriations of the city shall be based. It is a good bill and should become a law.

Boston has been held in leading strings by political stepfathers on Beacon Hill with consequent irritation at City Hall and extra work at the State House.

The experiment, if the Draper bill becomes a law, can have a fair trial under Mayor-elect Nichols for four years, with no danger of bankruptcy to the city.

SCIENTIFIC STANDARD A GREAT NEED

By Garrett P. Serviss

Noted Astronomer and Writer on Scientific Topics of Popular Interest

One of the great needs of our age is a popular standard of scientific judgment. There is so much gross work science, pretended science, half-baked science and even faked science in circulation that not only is the general reader often at a loss to know what to believe, but even the scientific specialist is often misled, not only by others but by himself.

Furthermore, the needed standard is fundamental for those who will head off any great scientific fallacies, to harmonize the conflicting views of the leading scientists of the world and to put our country under the banner of the American Association for the Advancement of Science. This Association, whose proceedings are of importance to every thinking man and woman, is to hold its annual meeting in Kansas City at the end of December and the beginning of January.

Two Objects

There are two objects before these meetings. First, they bring together the leaders in the many branches of scientific research, and widely diverse as many of them are, the mutual acquaintance of the chiefs from the highest to the lowest of science.

Famous investigators come out of their vegetarian, their classroom, their scientific workrooms to tell of what they have been doing, what new things they have discovered, what better methods have been devised during the year.

The Surgeon General, Headquarters Organization at which the results of the year's work are collected, make their reports, and the British Association lays its tiers of the line of battle. Then based upon the newest and widest field work of specialists is stimulating consciousness of an underlying unity.

Second object served is the printing of authoritative reports, keeping up-to-date information for the public. This offers a standard of scientific judgment for general use.

One does not have to be long in touch with inquiring minds to find out that they are continually led astray through lack of means to distinguish between what is sound and what is sensational; between what is verifiable and what is demonstrable. The growing popularity presented under the name of science.

Even things which have a genuine scientific name may be in their present state only hypothetical, or speculative, and consequently should not, by any means, be accepted as established scientific fact, or set forth as scientific theory. That there is an unfortunate tendency to take a guess for a truth, if in any way the name of science can be associated with it.

Unlimited credulity is a curious resultant product in some minds of the astonishing advances of practical science. Say "Science," and pass! All the pseudo sciences profit enormously from this. Many persons who are not ignorant or lacking in keen judgment about other things cannot tell false science from real science when they see it. Many such are victimized by fakers.

Strong Corrective

The American Association, with its meetings and its reports, can not but be a strong corrective for this tendency to accept and nurture error and pretense by mistake for scientific truth.

One of the most admirable and useful features of this association is its open door toward the public. There is no obstacle thrown in the way of any intelligent person becoming a member; on the contrary, new members are welcomed. At the annual meeting the general sessions are open and free to the public, and special lectures are given for all who wish to attend.

In a word, the association recognizes the fact that it is not enough to accumulate scientific knowledge, for it is equally important that such knowledge should be authoritatively disseminated. Thus furnished, it comes from its true sources, and stimulates intellectual culture.

ON "THE WINDS OF CHANCE"

LIFE, to some, is like
A RED SUN SINKING
And THOSE who are already
In the TWILIGHT YEARS
WATCH IT, whose
RESENTMENT
LIFE, to OTHERS, is a golden
Sun, high in a BLUE SKY
And as though it were
A CHALLENGE they respond
To it with VIGOR.
THESE MEN are in the
PRIME OF LIFE.
Some WOMEN see Life
As a YOUNG SUN rising
From the DARK CLOUDS of NIGHT. THESE, of course,
ARE IN LOVE.
SOME women see NO SUN in
Their sky, ALTHOUGH it is
But EARLY AFTERNOON.
Dear! Dear! FORTUNATELY WOMEN now have
TWO CHANCES.
The sun in THEIR sky CAN
BE a successful CAREER.
Or it can be a HOME.
For the FIRST, they must WORK; but for the SECOND
They need ONLY PRAY.
For a GUSTY DAY. For the
WINDS OF CHANCE blow
FUNNY THINGS in every WOMAN'S WAY.

LISTEN, WORLD!

By Elsie Robinson

Bernice would be thirty-one next birthday. She was pretty, lively, popular, and had a host of admirers. Her clothes were always the last word in chic. She was always first to adopt new dances, new slang, new fads in dress. She always had a good time.

Bernice was always saying: "If I were sure that I'd never be sorry, I'd quit it tomorrow," says Bernice. But she mourns some and she and Bernice's hair is still uncut. It will always be uncut because Bernice will never be sure that she won't be sorry if she does it.

That's the reason why Bernice isn't in England today. She had a wonderful chance to go to England as companion for Mrs. Winters. But Mrs. Winters is old and cranky and Bernice was having a nice time here, going around with a dandy crowd. Of course she wanted to go to England. She was really crazy to go to England. But suppose she got there and Mrs. Winters wasn't pleasant? Then she'd have given up her nice job here and lost out on all the good times. So Bernice decided not to go to England. She couldn't be sure.

Three times Bernice has had chances to marry but she couldn't be sure.

Bernice is getting old. Every time she looks in the mirror she finds more lines. She was simply Wild over Jim. But—suppose it didn't turn out right? Suppose they lost their money or got sick or developed a taste for liquor or did some other terrible thing? How she'd then regret the fact that she didn't stay single! So Bernice has stayed single.

Now you'd think, having taken all these precautions to escape danger and discomfort, Bernice would be enjoying an idyllic life. But far from it! Bernice is, in fact, extremely unhappy and uncomfortable.

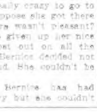
Bernice's life has become one great unhappy if. She has passed up a hundred opportunities because she feared there might be a price to pay. And now she's having a dozen times over in restlessness and regret.

Most of us are like that. We'd gladly sell a number of interesting, progressive, radical things, if only we were sure that we wouldn't be sorry we had done them.

So whether you bob your hair or don't bob your hair—whether you marry or don't marry—you'll pay a price, no doubt. As for me, I'd rather have something to show for my price, even if I had my doubts about the bargain.

A WIFE'S MEDITATIONS

By Helen Rowland



Helen Rowland

Every now and then, I meet a young man who confides to me that he wishes he could find a girl like the one his FATHER sometimes tells about.

That glorified girl of the "book-and-eye period," whose chief smells of violets, instead of cigarette smoke and whose kisses are something sweeter than a mixture of stale cocktails and lipstick.

A girl who would actually enjoy staying at HOME in the evening and just talking—instead of dragging him out to some palace of a movie or a wild cooking party.

A girl with all of a little feminine ways, who would [illegible] the lamplight and sing songs for him, instead of trying to [illegible] him with a pair of exposed knees.

A girl who would sympathize with his dreams, stimulate his purpose, fire his ambition—and leave SOMETHING to his imagination.

And, whenever I meet this rare and unusual youth, I tell him where he can find this rare and dearable girl.

* * *

He can find her somewhere, sitting at home, ALONE—wishing she could find the kind of boy, her MOTHER sometimes tells her about!

A boy who does not kid himself into thinking that he is the prize cynic of the age and that all the women are his "game."

A boy with a touch of sentiment, a dash of romance and more brain-cells than feet.

YOU know the kind of boy I mean—the boy whom every girl dreams about!

MEDBURY SAYS

By John P. Medbury

Kris Kringle is getting ready for his big night ride. The only difference between him and Paul Revere is that Santa Claus wears whiskers.

In all these years nobody has been able to figure out how he can go down so many chimneys and still have a white beard.

So many new buildings have gone up in the past twelve months that Santa Claus will have plenty of detours this year.

The fact that he never owns a house, he is the only man that keeps him from getting stuck in Kansas and Missouri.

The evening of the 24th will be a long, tedious ride and Santa is feeding his reindeer coffee to keep them awake.

And so that they won't get lost, he's mixing road maps in with their oats.

One little boy was so afraid that Kris Kringle would miss his house that he put a stop-light on the chimney.

Santa Claus covers the whole country in one evening. He's the world's champion rider. He makes the Four Horsemen look like pedestrians.

He's come and gone before Paul Revere could even get his horse out of the stable.

IMPORTANCE OF AGE OF SUSPENDERS

By DR. FRANK CRANE

To those who read character by outward appearances we call attention to the importance of the way a man holds up his trousers.

As a little boy, blithely impervious to appearances, he wends his carefree way, his decorum precariously preserved by more or less effective suspenders.

As a young man, succumbing to the dictates of fashion and the desire for feminine approval, he bisects himself with a belt.

Then later in life comes that critical period—the suspender age.

The follies of youth and the foibles of early manhood, in various degrees, have been left behind. The man begins to think of comfort more than looks. He begins to settle down. He dons suspenders.

Suspenders are the symbol of establishment.

A man's habits, ideas and ambitions are pretty well established when he attains the suspenders age. He has ceased to "put on" and is more frank in admitting that "he is what he is."

The time from childhood to the early twenties is the period when most of the moral habits become solidified.

At twenty-five most men have, in a general way, made up their minds and established their habits on most moral issues.

The time from the early twenties to the early thirties is the period when the professional manners and habits are ingrained.

The lines begin to harden. Those in business begin to acquire a businesslike air. Those who have entered the ministry begin to become ministerial. The young professors begin to exhibit the manners of the classroom.

The characteristics of the life work the man takes up begin to become part of his nature during the second period.

At the end of the second period comes the suspender age.

The day a man settles down to a life of galluses is the time to estimate his character.

Youth is a gamble. It may do anything. It upsets the dope continually.

But with the coming of the suspenders age a fairly accurate understanding of the man's real character and a prediction of his future can be made.

NEVER LOSE CONFIDENCE IN YOURSELF

Why allow your troubles to depress you so that you can think of nothing else?

Having made an error, do you lose confidence in yourself and your ability to do even ordinary things satisfactorily?

In such a state of mind you are likely to make more and more mistakes.

Does one error cause you to lose control of yourself?

All your thinking ability just vanishes when you realize you have committed an error, either social or technical.

To lose the mastery of self at such moments is a serious matter.

To be sure, you should not too lightly throw off the effects of an error; you should not dismiss the subject lightly from your mind.

But to worry and fuss and fume inwardly on account of mistakes is to pile up more in the end.

If, after a trying experience, it takes some little time to get back your poise, you must work harder and get control of your emotions.

If you cannot control your feelings, how can you expect to control your actions?
